Independent but engaged: support networks for solos

Instead of doing all your business development from your office, get out and make connections. Making the effort to introduce yourself within the broader legal community will make marketing easier in the long run, and will help you avoid the pitfalls of isolation. more

Wondering whether your practice structure could expose you to liability for other lawyers' work?

Lawyers working "in association" need to consider how they may be perceived. If you hold yourself out as member of a law firm, the courts may hold you to the same conflict requirements as a law firm partnership. more

Untangling the myths of excess insurance

Think you don't need excess insurance because you work in a small firm, don't practice real estate, or are not responsible for the work of any juniors? You may want to think again. more

Conflicts rules leave room for (careful) collegiality

If a colleague outside your firm asks for your opinion on a legal issue without disclosing the client's identity, and later discovers you will be representing that client's opponent, can you be removed from the record? more

About LAWPRO Webzine:

LAWPRO Webzine is distributed to LAWPRO insureds and other contacts (on request) to keep them up to date on the LAWPRO insurance program, risk management information and other news.

This publication includes techniques which are designed to minimize the likelihood of being sued for professional liability. The material presented does not establish, report, or create the standard of care for lawyers. The material is not a complete analysis of any of the topics covered, and readers should conduct their own appropriate legal research.
