LAWPRO is seeing a substantial increase in closing proceeds redirection frauds

The hallmark of these frauds is a request on or just before the day of closing, purportedly from the client, directing that the proceeds of the sale go to a different account. However, the request isn't really coming from the client, it's coming from a fraudster who has compromised the lawyer's or client's email account.

With last minute changes, always call to confirm, look for small anomalies in the email address, and train your staff to be alert. Watch this CPD to learn practical ways to avoid these growing and expensive frauds.
